

1. BIG BOX WETLANDS. Restored wetlands and restored urban grid allow a vital neighborhood to be connected with an undiscovered waterfront.

2. PENN'S LANDING. Center City's waterfront: civic, public, and connected.

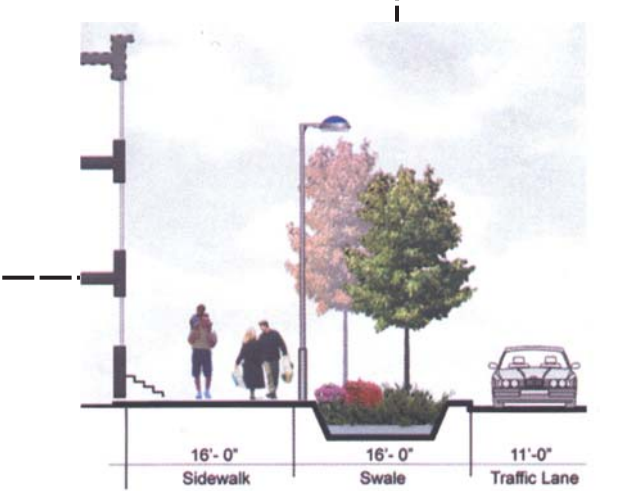

3. CALLOWHILL DOCKS. The heritage of Old City reconnected to the only surviving piece of the original waterfront, at a juncture with the regional highway system.

4. SPRING GARDEN TERMINUS. Parking transformed to park, at the terminus of one of the city's great boulevards. The river brought closer to the intersection of two avenues. A green link to the EI.

5. PENN TREATY POWER HOUSE. The two histories of Philadelphia—colonial and industrial—re-connected to the present life of the city.

6. FISHTOWN INTERCHANGE. Making sense of a tangle of highway infrastructure, maintaining industrial use while opening the waterfront to the public.

7. LEHIGH VIADUCT. Potential mixed-use with strong regional connectivity via railroad right of way.

8. PULASKI PARK. Existing green space expanded and connected more firmly to its community by integrating its industrial features and linkage with other parks.
